

- The same rule applies for all of your backup hitters.
- The Backup only counts if the starter plays less than the 7 games needed.

Deadlines

- By the first game on Monday, your full weekly line-up must be left on the Mr. Sports web site.
- Trades are due by Wednesday Midnight Central Time or on the web site.
- Round 1 of Transactions and Trade Talk are due by Thursday Midnight Central Time on the web site. Round 2 of Transactions are due by Friday Midnight Central Time on the web site.

Disabled List

- The Disabled List allows you to carry up to two injured players without losing a roster spot. When a MLB team puts a player on the DL, you are eligible to put that player on your DL the next day. When the player comes off the DL in MLB, you have 7 days from that day to take that player off your DL.
- If the player is not removed by the 8th day since coming off the DL, the player will be waived. NO EXCEPTIONS! If you cannot pay attention to when a player is coming off the DL and you don't want to lose that player, then don't put that player on your DL.
- A DL move can be made at any time. When you take him off the DL, you can either waive someone outright or put someone else that is eligible for the DL in his place.

Trades

- Once two teams agree on the trade then each person must submit the trade to the web site. If the trade is not identical it does not go through.
- There is no trading limit. No cash or player to be named later trades will be allowed.
- There will be a 20 person Trade Committee that will vote on every trade submitted. Trades with more positive votes than negative votes will go through. The Commissioner does NOT have the power to overturn the Trade Committee's decisions.
- You MUST waive a player if your roster is going to exceed the 29 player limit.
- You are not allowed to trade player just received that week.
- Trades that are voided will not be allowed to be reworked for that week.
- The Trading Deadline is during week 14.

Wins and Losses

- Your total score for the week is compared to the total score for the 3 teams you played. Those you outscored by 50, you sweep 3-0, those that outscored you by 50, sweep you 3-0. If those situations do not apply, then the higher scoring team wins the series 2-1.
- The winner in case of a tie will be the team with the highest scoring player.
- If the highest scoring player is also tied, the winner is the team with the 2nd highest scoring player. If the two teams are still tied then the winner is the team with the 3rd highest, etc.

- The first week of the season, each team plays two 4-game series and one 1-game series. The same rules apply but when there is a tie in the 4 game series, then the series is split 2-2.

Waivers/Free Agents

- You can pick up ONLY two players per week.
- For each round of pickups, if two teams want the same player, the team with the worst record gets him, with the tiebreaker being the lowest average.
- If a player is waived to complete a trade or waived in round 1 transactions, he is available to be picked up the same week. If a player is waived for a transaction for round 2, he is not available to be picked up until the following week.
- Transactions can be made through the League Finals. For the playoffs, a transaction period will be available during the second week of the 1st and 2nd round for ALL teams.

Playoffs

- After 18 weeks of play, the top team in each division and the top team that did not win the divisions advance to the playoffs.
- If two teams have the same win total, the tiebreaker is scoring average, then head to head record, then pitching average.
- The team with the best record plays the wild card team. The other two teams play each other with the conference winner being the highest seed. They play during weeks 19 and 20.
- The higher seed gets 1 point per difference in total scoring average before the playoff round starts if they have a better record.
- A wild card team cannot have homefield over a division winner even if they have the better average.
- If the team with the higher seed has the worst average, there is no advantage for either team.
- If two teams are tied after the two weeks the winner is the team with the highest contributing player over the 2 weeks. If still tied, then second highest, etc.
- The two teams play during weeks 21-22 of the season with the highest scorer declared champion of the league and advances to the Super Tournament.
